2017–2018

Supporting positive change in communities

The Tudor Trust

The Tudor Trust is an independent grant-making trust. Most of our grant making is focused on the UK, although we also run a small targeted grants programme promoting ecological agriculture in Zimbabwe, Kenya and Uganda.

In the UK we make grants to a wide range of organisations that address the many different needs of people at the margins of our society. We aim to listen to what our applicants tell us about their communities: both the challenges they face and the opportunities they want to build on. We can then provide some of the resources they need to achieve their aims and make a positive difference within these communities.

We focus on supporting smaller groups which are embedded in their communities: many of these are charities, but we can also fund other types of organisations including constituted community groups and community interest companies as long as the work we are supporting has a clearly identifiable charitable purpose.

Tudor has been making grants since 1955 and our trustees' approach to grant making has evolved over this time. In recent years we have moved away from setting our own funding priorities to focus on supporting what our applicants themselves identify as most important. This means that applicants don't need to design their application against a set of external priorities but can instead apply for what their organisation really wants.

Because we respond directly to our applicants' priorities many of our grants go towards things like salaries and the other core running costs of an organisation – so strengthening the whole organisation rather than to specific projects.

Please see our website www.tudortrust.org.uk for more information on our work, and for up-to-date details of the grants we make.

Our principles

We base our activity on the following strongly felt principles. We are working to find ways of evaluating our practice against them and seek to work with those who are similarly motivated.

- Supporting communities to drive their own positive change.
- Investing in relationships as the foundation of all we do – starting from a position of trust and demonstrating that we can be trusted.
- Listening with intent: always trying to hear the real voice.
- Valuing people’s time: acting quickly where helpful and taking time where needed.
- Using learning, our experience and creativity to offer flexible support to communities.

In our work we will actively use our resources, and the freedom and independence they give, to contribute to the health and strength of civil society.

We established these principles during 2016–2017 and refined them further over the last year. We are now working on embedding principles-focused evaluation within Tudor: thinking through how our principles can be applied at different points in the grant-making process and how we can use them to review and reflect on our work.

Our approach to funding

We don’t have specific funding programmes designed to advance any particular agenda as we think that groups working on the ground are best placed to identify challenges and develop solutions which meet the real needs of the people they work with. Our funding guidelines remained unchanged in 2017–2018, but continued to emphasise our commitment to supporting work which addresses marginalisation, as our applicants choose to define it. Alongside this focus on marginalisation we are interested in funding organisations which can demonstrate a combination of characteristics and qualities including:

- A focus on encouraging and developing positive social connections and relationships
- Organisations which are embedded in their community and can identify and channel the potential within that community
- Organisations which listen to and are responsive to their users and which give users a voice
- An emphasis on offering longer-term engagement and support
- Organisations which generate a ripple effect – a wider impact beyond the immediate beneficiaries of the work

Tudor concentrates on supporting smaller, under-resourced organisations: in our experience smaller-scale organisations are in a good position to deliver positive change because they know their communities, can build on their strengths and can be flexible and agile when responding to need. While we say in our guidelines that we are most likely to fund groups with an annual income of less than £1 million in practice the majority of the organisations we support are smaller than this: in 2017–2018 82% of our grants went to groups with an annual income of less than £500,000.

We want to be a helpful and flexible funder, making grants in a responsive, creative and straightforward way. A key element of our approach is that we can offer more than just financial support, where this is helpful. We can offer advice and development support where this is needed, working to build a funding relationship which is based on openness and trust.

Grants review

Over the year Tudor made grants supporting a wide range of work which met our overarching aim of addressing the multiple needs of people at the margins of UK society. We also made grants in Africa under a targeted programme. This review document provides information about all the grants we made last year alongside a more detailed analysis of applications received and grants made. We hope that this will give you an understanding both of the kind of organisations and work Tudor supports and of our approach to grant making.

In 2017–2018 we continued to share our grants data via 360Giving, an initiative working to help UK grant makers to publish their data openly online, to an agreed standard. Publishing information about our grants in an open format on our own website, and through 360Giving, means that it can be shared and compared more easily, enabling learning and supporting decision making. To find out more go to www.360giving.org

The UK voluntary and community sector still operates within an uncertain and testing environment. Funding constraints have put communities and the organisations working within them under huge pressure: many organisations have seen their funding reduce as need and demand has intensified. However the grants list shows that, despite the many challenges it is currently facing, the UK voluntary and community sector remains both strong and diverse. Tudor's trustees and staff continue to find inspiration in the passion and energy with which the groups we support tackle the challenges they face, their ability to identify and build on opportunities for change, and their determination to make a real and lasting difference in the communities in which they work.

The information in this grants review expands on information contained in Tudor's full annual report and accounts for 2017–2018, which are independently audited. The annual report and accounts will give you a wider perspective on our work over the year, beyond our grant making. You can download our annual report from our website www.tudortrust.org.uk. If you'd like a hard copy please contact us and we will send one out to you.

If you have any questions about our grants which aren't answered in this review please do get in touch. You can call us on 020 7727 8522.

Applications in 2017–2018

We received 2,646 applications for funding in 2017–2018, an 8% decrease on the previous year.

97% of the applications we received were eligible under our guidelines. This high level of eligibility is due to the open nature of our funding guidelines which are designed to allow groups to apply for funding which meets their own priorities.

Just under 13% of eligible applications ultimately received a grant this year. Our flexible guidelines mean that we receive many more applications than we can ever fund and inevitably this leads to disappointment for many applicants seeking funding for good and important work. We have therefore tried to make sure that our application process is simple and straightforward, using a two-stage process to keep the time and resources groups have to dedicate to completing their application to a minimum.

On average it took 19 days for us to give applicants a decision on their first-stage proposal: well within the one month target we set out within our funding guidelines.

We aim to let applicants know whether or not they have received a grant within three months of their application going to second stage. In 2017–2018 it took us an average of 83 days to reach a final decision on a grant from this point.

97% of applications which went through to second stage and which progressed to committee stage received a grant.

Grants made in 2017–2018

Number of applications	2,646	2,883
Number of eligible applications	2,574	2,796
Applications presented to committee	337	337
Number of grants	328	327
Total amount committed	£17,824,066	£16,136,618
Average grant	£54,342	£49,347

We made 328 grants totalling £17.8 million in 2017–2018.

The average grant was £54,342 – almost £5,000 up on last year. However if we discount the 36 small staff grants, development grants and Africa Group capacity-building grants made over the year we reach a more representative average grant figure of £60,685. We explain a bit more about these smaller grants later on in the grants list.

When we talk to our applicants we suggest that they don't refer to our average grant size when framing their request. We are keen to support what groups actually need so the average grant size is largely irrelevant in practice. Instead we encourage applicants to look at our grants lists (posted every three months on our website) to get a sense of the range and level of grants we make. Frequently, too, applicants don't put a figure to their request at the first stage: this is in line with our final application question which asks how Tudor can best help them, rather than how much funding they are looking for. The chart overleaf shows the profile of the grants made last year by size.

We made 328 grants totalling £17.8 million in 2017–2018.

Grants by size

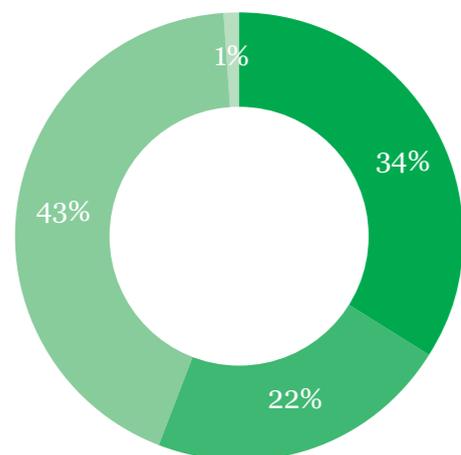

Our aim is to make grants which respond directly to the priorities of our applicants and we also want to fund in ways which strengthen the whole organisation, not just particular areas of its work. Applicants continue to tell us that their biggest challenge is to secure core funding to cover things like key salaries and day-to-day running costs: this is reflected in the grants we make.

Across all grants made in the year 86% by value went towards core funding, 10% towards specific projects, 3.5% towards capital projects and 0.5% towards development funding (development grants are small additional grants made to help strengthen or develop a particular aspect of an organisation).

By value, 86% of our grants went towards core funding.

Grants to new organisations

- Continuation
- Funded before
- New organisation
- Already funding

43% of our grants went to groups we have never funded before.

In 2017–2018 43% of our grants went to organisations which we have never funded before; 34% were for continuation funding (so followed straight on from a previous grant); 22% went to organisations which we have funded at some point in the past and just 1% went to organisations which were already holding another grant from us.

Tudor wants to be an open and accessible funder and this can be demonstrated by our commitment to funding groups we haven't supported before. We can also back organisations strongly even when they are new to us – more than half of the three year grants made over the year went to groups we hadn't funded before. This is balanced, however, by a wish to enter reasonably long-term funding relationships where this is appropriate.

36% of the revenue grants made in 2017–2018 were made over three years or longer, 34% for two years and 27% over one year.

However 35% of the two or three year grants made over the year followed straight on from a previous grant, usually itself made over two or three years. This means that we often fund for a longer period – in many cases five or six years – than might be immediately obvious through reading our grants list.

This table shows how our grants were distributed by region in 2017–2018. Tudor is a responsive funder, running an open grants programme and making grants in response to applications received. This can mean that we see fluctuations in grants going to different parts of the UK from year to year. We do however keep an eye on where our grants are going and if we feel we are not receiving enough applications from a particular area we try to make sure that potential applicants have heard of us and understand what we might offer. We do this by attending funding events, where we can meet local groups, and by talking to the local infrastructure bodies and funding advisers who support voluntary and community groups in their fundraising.

This year the level of funding going into Northern Ireland and Scotland recovered to a stronger level after an unwelcome decline last year. However grants made to organisations based in the Eastern region dropped again with only 2% of grants by value going there – in 2016–2017 it was 6%. This region is traditionally something of a 'cold spot' for Tudor in terms of application received.

The organisations we supported in 2017–2018

Tudor has a particular interest in supporting smaller-scale organisations. We therefore monitor the size of the organisations we fund, using organisation expenditure as an indicator. In 2017–2018 29% of our grants went to organisations with a turnover of less than £100,000, with 82% going to organisations spending less than £500,000 a year. A full breakdown of the grants we made to organisations of different sizes is given below: this analysis does not include staff grants, development grants or Africa Group capacity-building grants.

Tudor has a track record in supporting grassroots community activity, and in 2017–2018 33% of our grants provided support to organisations which underpin the stability and resilience of communities and encourage inclusion and positive social connections. These community centres and resource centres, community development groups, community food projects, community gardens and growing schemes and neighbourhood advice projects play a vital role in improving the quality of life for local people.

29% of our grants went to organisations with an annual turnover of less than £100,000.

Engagement with applicants and grant holders

Alongside this we also support organisations which address marginalisation and disadvantage in a more targeted way: for example in 2017–2018 8% of our grants went to groups providing support to refugees and asylum seekers, 7% to groups working with people with disabilities, 7% to groups working with people with experience of homelessness or who are vulnerably housed, and 5% to groups working in the field of criminal justice.

We also monitor the proportion of our grants going towards targeted work with BAME communities, or to BAME-led groups. In 2017–2018 17% of our grants went towards work with this specific BAME focus.

216 visits and meetings with applicants and grant holders in 2017–2018.

Over the year Tudor’s Grants Team worked with a portfolio of around 750 ‘active’ grants, developing new applications, responding to reports and making payments as well as providing support where needed around a range of issues including governance, organisational development, recruitment, financial management, funding and evaluation. Over the last few years we have noted an increase in the level and complexity of the grants management required across our portfolio as a whole, and this continued in 2017–2018. Organisations approach us with a wide range of difficulties and issues and we provide support where we can, whether by providing advice directly, sourcing more specialist guidance or agreeing changes in how our funding can be used.

Talking to our applicants and grant holders is one of the best ways for us to gather information, intelligence and learning. We appreciate the value of face-to-face contact so try and visit as many applicants and grant holders as we can, although this can be challenging as we are a national funder with a relatively small staff team. In 2017–2018 staff and trustees visited 145 organisations, and met another 71 at our offices.

UK grants 2017–2018

This section of the grants list covers most of our grants made within the UK: primarily grants made in response to applications received under our funding guidelines but also development grants – small grants up to a maximum of £7,500 intended to help a group strengthen and develop a particular aspect of their organisation. Development grants are made in response to a need identified by an organisation in discussion with their grants manager. Twelve UK development grants were made in 2017–2018.

Overseas grants

Although Tudor is primarily a UK funder we also make a number of grants in Africa each year. Tudor's Africa Group – a small special interest group made up of trustees and staff – runs a targeted programme promoting ecological agriculture in Zimbabwe, Kenya and Uganda. This is a proactive funding programme and we don't consider unsolicited applications.

Through the Group, Tudor supports farmer-to-farmer learning initiatives which are cost effective and scalable and also build knowledge and expertise. Tudor also funds centres that can demonstrate agro-ecological approaches and act as informal or formal learning establishments. We encourage peer-to-peer learning between organisations through exchange visits and hold a biennial conference in Africa. Our ultimate aim is strengthening the voice of the smallholder farmer – this resonates with our work in the UK which focuses on supporting marginalised communities.

In 2017–2018 Tudor also made a small number of grants towards international work that sits outside the Africa Group's programme. These include a grant to the New Ventures Fund, based in the United States, to support the work of the Global Alliance for the Future of Food and a grant to the Bees for Development Trust, towards their work worldwide to alleviate poverty and maintain biodiversity. Tudor's trustees also agreed two further grants on behalf of the V Kann Rasmussen Foundation in the United States: these were made to allow Peter Lipman to continue his work of researching and reporting on the complex ecosystems of international environmental problems.
