Supporting positive change in communities

2019—2020

The Tudor Trust

The Tudor Trust is an independent grant-making trust. Most of our grant making is focused on the UK, although we also run a small targeted grants programme promoting ecological agriculture in Zimbabwe, Kenya and Uganda.

In the UK we make grants to a wide range of organisations that address the many different needs of people at the margins of our society. We aim to listen to what our applicants tell us about their communities: both the challenges they face and the strengths and opportunities they can build on. We can then provide some of the resources they need to achieve their aims and make a positive difference within these communities.

We focus on supporting smaller groups which are embedded in their communities: many of these are charities, but we can also fund other types of organisations including constituted community groups and community interest companies as long as the work we are supporting has a clearly identifiable charitable purpose.

Tudor has been making grants since 1955 and our trustees' approach to grant making has evolved over this time. In recent years we have moved away from setting our own funding priorities to focus on supporting what our applicants themselves identify as most important. This means that applicants don't need to design their application to meet rigid external criteria but can instead apply for what their organisation really wants.

Because we respond directly to our applicants' priorities most of our grants go towards things like salaries and the other core running costs of an organisation – so they contribute to strengthening the whole organisation rather than to specific projects.

Our principles

Tudor's principles underpin all aspects of our work, and act as a navigational guide when we are reflecting on our practice or considering challenging issues:

- Supporting communities to drive their own positive change.
- Investing in relationships as the foundation of all we do – starting from a position of trust and demonstrating that we can be trusted.
- Listening with intent: always trying to hear the real voice.
- Valuing people's time: acting quickly where helpful and taking time where needed.
- Using learning, our experience and creativity to offer flexible support to communities.
- Making the most of our resources and independence and being open to challenge.

Trustees and staff reviewed these principles over the year: this final principle was added following these discussions. It is intended to explicitly acknowledge Tudor's freedom of thought and action, while keeping the door open to change and challenge.

We continued to explore principles-focused evaluation, an approach which helps organisations hold their values at the heart of what they do and assess whether they are living up to them. We have 'paused' at various points in our grant making – for example when deciding which applications to take through to second stage, or at grants meetings – to think about how and when we have applied our principles during the decision-making process, or whether there were points when our principles should have come into play, but didn't.

Over the last couple of years we have placed less emphasis on the idea that principles-focused evaluation can 'prove' the value of our work or measure progress: we are instead using our principles as a lens through which we can reflect on various aspects of our practice, with the aim of learning and improving.

Our approach to funding

We don't have specific funding programmes designed to advance any particular agenda as we think that groups working on the ground are best placed to identify challenges and develop solutions which meet the real needs of the people they work with. We know that many organisations value our consistent and relational approach to funding so our funding guidelines remained unchanged in 2019–2020. The guidelines emphasise our commitment to supporting work which addresses marginalisation, however our applicants choose to define this. Alongside this focus on marginalisation we are interested in funding organisations which demonstrate a combination of key characteristics and qualities including:

- A focus on encouraging and developing positive social connections and relationships.
- Organisations which are embedded in their community and can identify and channel the potential within that community.
- Organisations which listen to and are responsive to their users and which give users a voice.
- An emphasis on offering longer-term engagement and support.
- Organisations which generate a ripple effect – a wider impact beyond the immediate beneficiaries of the work.

Tudor concentrates on supporting smaller, under-resourced organisations: in our experience smaller-scale organisations are in a good position to deliver positive change because they know their communities, can build on their strengths and can respond to changing circumstances with great flexibility. While we say in our guidelines that we are most likely to fund groups with an annual income of less than £1 million in practice the majority of the organisations we support are smaller than this: in 2019–2020 83% of our grants went to groups with an annual income of less than £500,000.

We want to be a helpful and flexible funder, providing support in a responsive, creative and straightforward way. This means that we can offer more than just financial support, where this is helpful. We aim to build a funding relationship based on openness and trust, with advice and development support provided where this is needed.

Grants review

Over the year Tudor made grants supporting a wide range of work which met our overarching aim of addressing the multiple needs of people at the margins of UK society. We also made grants in Africa under a targeted programme. This review document provides information about all the grants we made last year alongside a more detailed analysis of applications received and grants made. We hope that this will give you an understanding both of the kind of organisations and work Tudor supports and of our approach to grant making.

We continued to share our grants data via 360Giving, an initiative enabling UK grant makers to publish their data openly online, to an agreed standard. Publishing information about our grants in an open format on our own website, and through 360Giving, means that it can be shared and compared more easily, promoting learning and supporting decision making. To find out more go to www.threesixtygiving.org

Tudor funds groups working all over the UK, addressing a huge range of issues: what they have in common is their creativity, adaptability and energy and their unshakeable commitment to the people and communities they work with. When the Coronavirus lockdown hit in March 2020 voluntary and community organisations showed what they were made of: we were consistently impressed, though not surprised, by the tenacity, connectedness and ability to shift and adapt demonstrated by the hundreds of groups we support, and by the wider voluntary and community sector.

The information in this grants review expands on information contained in Tudor's full Annual Report and Accounts for 2019–2020. Our annual report gives a wider perspective on our work, beyond our grant making: you can download a copy from our website www.tudortrust.org.uk

Applications and grants made in 2019 – 2020

We received 2,568 applications in 2019-2020 – 2% down on the previous year.

We made 344 grants totalling £20.9 million in 2019–2020.

The ‘success rate’ for applications was around one in eight – 13% of applicants received a grant.

	2020	2019
Number of applications	2,568	2,629
Number of grants	344	311
Total amount committed	£20,940,850	£17,899,079
Average grant	£60,975	£57,553

£20.9m We made 344 grants totalling £20.9 million in 2019–2020

The average grant agreed in the year was for £60,975. However if we discount the 63 small staff grants, development grants, Africa Group capacity-building grants and co-produced grants made over the year we reach a more representative average grant figure of £73,737 – around £9,000 up on last year. We explain a bit more about these smaller grants later on in the grants list.

When we talk to applicants we suggest that they don’t refer to our average grant size when framing their request. This is because we are keen to support what groups actually need so the average grant size is largely irrelevant in practice. Instead we encourage applicants to look at our grants lists (updated regularly on our website) to get a sense of the range and level of grants we make. Our final application question asks how Tudor can best help, rather than how much funding is being requested. This means that many applicants don’t put a figure to their request at this first stage. The chart overleaf shows the profile of the grants made last year by size.

“Our final application question asks how Tudor can best help, rather than how much funding is being requested.”

We want to make grants which respond directly to the priorities of our applicants and we are also committed to funding in ways which strengthen the whole organisation, not just particular areas of its work. Applicants continue to tell us that their biggest challenge is to secure core funding to cover things like key salaries and day-to-day running costs: this is reflected in the grants we make.

Across all grants made in the year 92% by value went towards core funding, 6% towards specific projects and 2% towards capital work.

92% By value, 92% of our grants went towards core funding

“Applicants continue to tell us that their biggest challenge is to secure core funding to cover things like key salaries and day-to-day running costs: this is reflected in the grants we make.”

Grants to new organisations

39% 39% of our grants went to organisations which we have never funded before.

- Continuation
- Funded before
- New organisation
- Already funding

In 2019–2020 39% of our grants went to organisations which we have never funded before; 36% were for continuation funding (so followed straight on from a previous grant); 19% went to organisations which we have funded at some point in the past and 6% went to organisations which were already holding another grant from us.

Tudor wants to be an open and accessible funder and this can be demonstrated by our commitment to funding groups we haven't supported before. We can back organisations strongly even when they are new to us – 44% of the three year grants made over the year went to groups we hadn't funded before. This commitment to supporting new organisations is balanced, however, by our wish to develop reasonably long-term funding relationships with existing grant holders where this is appropriate.

48% of the revenue grants made in 2019–2020 were made over three years or longer, 20% for two years and 27% over one year. Around half of the one-year grants we made – 44 out of 91 – were small staff grants, development grants or Africa Group capacity-building grants, so one-off rather than 'mainstream' grants.

Alongside this 43% of the two or three year grants made over the year followed straight on from a previous grant, usually itself made over two or three years. This means that we often fund for a longer period – in many cases five or six years – than might be immediately obvious through reading our grants list.

Total	344	£20,940,850	100%	NA	NA

This table shows where our grants went in 2019–2020. Tudor is a reactive funder, running an open grants programme and making grants in response to applications received. This means that we see fluctuations in grants going to different parts of the UK from year to year.

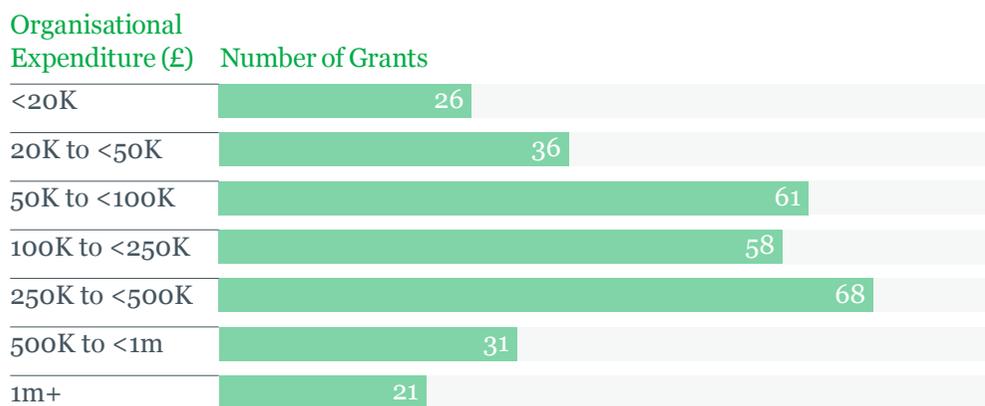

When reviewing our ‘give’ per region we focus on the grant per head figure, rather than the actual value of grants made, so that we can assess our grant commitments in the light of population figures. This year saw increased levels of funding going into the East Midlands, the North East, the South East and Scotland. Conversely, the grant per head figures for London, the North West and Wales dropped quite significantly. With relatively few grants going to each region these figures simply provide a ‘snapshot’ of how our funding is distributed, but they do help us to decide where we might focus our efforts in terms of encouraging applications.

For example, the Eastern region has traditionally been something of a ‘cold spot’ for Tudor in terms of applications received and funded: in 2018–2019 our grant give here was just £0.06 per head. During the year under review we gave some focused attention to this region, including spending time meeting groups and finding out about the voluntary sector ‘ecosystem’ in Peterborough: this helped increase the grant per head figure to £0.18 this year.

The organisations we supported in 2019-2020

Tudor has a particular interest in supporting smaller-scale organisations. We therefore monitor the size of the organisations we fund, using the organisation’s annual expenditure as an indicator. In 2019-2020 41% of our grants went to organisations with a turnover of less than £100,000, with 83% going to organisations spending less than £500,000 a year. A full breakdown of the grants we made to organisations of different sizes is given below: this analysis does not include staff grants, development grants or Africa Group capacity-building grants.

Grants by organisation’s annual expenditure

Tudor has a track record in supporting grassroots community activity, and in 2019-2020 25% of our grants went to organisations which support the resilience and stability of communities while also encouraging inclusion and positive social connections – so to community centres and resource centres, community development groups, community food projects, community gardens and growing schemes and local advice and advocacy projects.

Alongside this we also support organisations which address marginalisation and disadvantage in a more targeted way: for example in 2019-2020 10% of our grants went to groups providing support to refugees and asylum seekers, 10% to groups working with people with mental health issues, 7% towards work with people who are homeless, at risk of homelessness or vulnerably housed and 4% to groups working with people with disabilities.

We also monitor the proportion of our grants going towards targeted work with BAME communities, or to BAME-led groups. In 2019-2020 16% of our grants went towards work with this specific BAME focus. We don’t currently have a way of separating out BAME-led work from work with BAME communities: we will be working to change this during the year ahead.

41% 41% of our grants went to organisations with a turnover of less than £100,000

Engagement with applicants and grant holders

Over the year Tudor's Grants Team worked with a portfolio of around 770 'active' grants, developing new applications, responding to reports and making payments as well as providing support where needed around a range of issues including governance, organisational development, recruitment, financial management, funding and evaluation.

The groups we fund continue to operate within a pressurised and volatile climate, struggling to meet increasing demand as resources reduce. Organisations approach us with a wide range of difficulties and issues and we provide support where we can, whether by offering advice directly, sourcing more specialist guidance or agreeing changes in how our funding can be used.

Talking to our applicants and grant holders is one of the best ways for us to gather information, intelligence and learning, and is also crucial in building and strengthening trusting relationships. We appreciate the value of face-to-face contact so try to visit as many applicants and grant holders as we can, although this can be challenging as we are a national funder with a relatively small staff team. In 2019–2020 staff and trustees visited 174 organisations, and met another 88 at our offices.

174 In 2019–2020 staff and trustees visited 174 organisations

Hartlepool grants 2019–2020

In June 2019 staff and trustees spent three days in Hartlepool visiting organisations and engaging in face-to-face grant making. Two members of the grants team undertook a great deal of preparatory work during the first half of the year, supported by local anchor organisation the Wharton Trust, getting to know the town and identifying groups which might benefit from a small grant. Over an afternoon half-hour conversations took place, with a trustee and a member of staff having open conversations with group representatives. A funding request was developed through each conversation: later in the day trustees and staff came together, reflected on the conversations, and approved grants of up to £5,000 for each group. IVAR acted as our learning partner in this work, and their paper The power of face-to-face grant-making: Small grants in Hartlepool, shares some of the learning drawn from the experience.

Overseas grants 2019–2020

Although Tudor is primarily a UK funder we also make a number of grants in Africa each year. Tudor’s Africa Group – a small special interest group made up of trustees and staff – runs a proactive programme promoting ecological agriculture in Zimbabwe, Kenya and Uganda.

Through the Group, Tudor supports farmer-to-farmer learning initiatives which are cost effective and scalable and also build knowledge and expertise. Tudor also funds centres that can demonstrate agro-ecological approaches and act as informal or formal learning establishments. We encourage peer-to-peer learning between organisations through exchange visits and hold a biennial conference in Africa. Our ultimate aim is to strengthen the voice of the smallholder farmer – this resonates with our work in the UK which focuses on supporting marginalised communities.

We also make capacity-building grants to groups we fund in Africa, to help them share learning or develop particular aspects of their work. Four capacity-building grants were made in 2019–2020.

In the summer of 2019 the Africa Group reviewed its remit and agreed to extend its core funding to 28 regularly-funded organisations to a full five years. This was intended to give confidence and a degree of stability to these groups, while freeing up time and energy to focus on developing and funding strategic work through partnerships. Bringing all core grants up to a five-year term accounts for the increase in grants commitments made by the Africa Group in the year under review.
