The Tudor Trust

The Tudor Trust is an independent grant-making trust. Most of our grant making is focused on the UK, although we also run a small targeted grants programme promoting ecological agriculture in Zimbabwe, Kenya and Uganda.

In the UK we make grants to a wide range of organisations that address the many different needs of people at the margins of our society. We aim to listen to what our applicants tell us about their communities: both the challenges they face and the strengths and opportunities they can build on. We can then provide some of the resources they need to achieve their aims and make a positive difference within these communities.

We focus on supporting smaller groups which are embedded in their communities: many of these are charities, but we can also fund other types of organisations including constituted community groups and community interest companies as long as the work we are supporting has a clearly identifiable charitable purpose.

Tudor has been making grants since 1955 and our trustees' approach to grant making has evolved over this time. In recent years we have moved away from setting our own funding priorities to focus on supporting what our applicants themselves identify as most important. This means that applicants don't need to design their application to meet external criteria but can instead apply for what their organisation really wants.

Because we respond directly to our applicants' priorities most of our grants go towards things like salaries and the other core running costs of an organisation – so they contribute to strengthening the whole organisation rather than to specific projects.

Our principles

We base our activity on the following strongly felt principles. We are working to find ways of evaluating our practice against them and seek to work with those who are similarly motivated.

- Supporting communities to drive their own positive change.
- Investing in relationships as the foundation of all we do – starting from a position of trust and demonstrating that we can be trusted.
- Listening with intent: always trying to hear the real voice.
- Valuing people's time: acting quickly where helpful and taking time where needed.
- Using learning, our experience and creativity to offer flexible support to communities.

In our work we will actively use our resources, and the freedom and independence they give, to contribute to the health and strength of civil society.

We continue to explore principles-focused evaluation, thinking through how our values can be applied at different points in the grant-making process, how we can use them to review and reflect on our work and whether this approach could help us to be more accountable to ourselves and others. Over the last couple of years we have placed less emphasis on the idea that principles-focused evaluation can 'prove' the value of our work or measure progress: we are currently interested in using our principles as a lens through which we can reflect on various aspects of our practice, with the aim of learning and improving.

Our approach to funding

We don't have specific funding programmes designed to advance any particular agenda as we think that groups working on the ground are best placed to identify challenges and develop solutions which meet the real needs of the people they work with. We know that many organisations value our consistent and relational approach to funding so our funding guidelines remained unchanged in 2018–2019. The guidelines emphasise our commitment to supporting work which addresses marginalisation, as our applicants choose to define it. Alongside this focus on marginalisation we are interested in funding organisations which can demonstrate a combination of characteristics and qualities including:

- A focus on encouraging and developing positive social connections and relationships
- Organisations which are embedded in their community and can identify and channel the potential within that community
- Organisations which listen to and are responsive to their users and which give users a voice
- An emphasis on offering longer-term engagement and support
- Organisations which generate a ripple effect – a wider impact beyond the immediate beneficiaries of the work

Tudor concentrates on supporting smaller, under-resourced groups: in our experience smaller-scale organisations are in a good position to deliver positive change because they know their communities, can build on their strengths and can respond to changing circumstances with great flexibility. While we say in our guidelines that we are most likely to fund groups with an annual income of less than £1 million, in practice the majority of the organisations we support are smaller than this: in 2018–2019 82% of our grants went to groups with an annual income of less than £500,000.

We want to be a helpful and flexible funder, providing support in a responsive, creative and straightforward way. This means that we can offer more than just financial support, where this is helpful. We aim to build a funding relationship based on openness and trust, with advice and development support provided where this is needed.

Grants review

Over the year Tudor made grants supporting a wide range of work which met our overarching aim of addressing the multiple needs of people at the margins of UK society. We also made grants in Africa under a targeted programme. This review document provides information about all the grants we made last year alongside a more detailed analysis of applications received and grants made. We hope that this will give you an understanding both of the kind of organisations and work Tudor supports and of our approach to grant making.

In 2018–2019 we continued to share our grants data via 360Giving, an initiative enabling UK grant makers to publish their data openly online, to an agreed standard. Publishing information about our grants in an open format on our own website, and through 360Giving, means that it can be shared and compared more easily, promoting learning and supporting decision making. To find out more go to www.threesixtygiving.org.

Tudor funds groups working all over the UK, addressing a huge range of issues: what they have in common is their creativity, adaptability and energy and their unshakeable commitment to the people and communities they work with.

The grants list shows that, despite the many challenges it is currently facing, the UK voluntary and community sector remains both strong and diverse. Tudor's trustees and staff continue to find inspiration in the resilience and enthusiasm of the organisations we fund and their determination to make a real and lasting difference in the communities in which they work. We are pleased that we are able to provide some of the support that they need, travelling alongside them on some of their journey.

The information in this grants review expands on information contained in Tudor's full annual report and accounts for 2018–2019. This document is independently audited and will give you a wider perspective on our work over the year, beyond our grant making. You can download our annual report from our website www.tudortrust.org.uk. If you'd like to receive a hard copy please contact us and we will send one out to you.

If you have any questions about our grants which aren't answered in this review please do get in touch. You can call us on 020 7727 8522.

Applications in 2018–2019

We received 2,629 applications for funding in 2018–2019, just 17 fewer than the previous year.

97% of the applications we received were eligible under our guidelines. This high level of eligibility is due to the open nature of our funding guidelines which are designed to allow groups to apply for funding which meets their own priorities.

Our flexible funding guidelines mean that we receive many more applications than we can ever fund and inevitably this leads to disappointment for many applicants seeking funding for good and important work. We therefore try to make sure that our application process is simple and straightforward, using a two-stage process to keep the time and resources groups have to dedicate to completing their application to a minimum. 12% of eligible applications ultimately received a grant last year.

On average it took 20 days for us to give applicants a decision on their first-stage proposal: well within the one month target set out in our funding guidelines.

We aim to let applicants know whether or not they have received a grant within three months of their application going to second stage. In 2018–2019 it took us an average of 74 days to reach a final decision on a grant from this point.

99% of applications which went through to second stage and which progressed to committee received a grant.

Total amount committed	£17,899,079	£17,824,066
Average grant	£57,553	£54,342

We made 311 grants totalling £17.9 million in 2018–2019.

The average grant agreed in the year was for £57,553. However if we discount the 36 small staff grants, development grants and Africa Group capacity-building grants made over the year we reach a more representative average grant figure of £64,740 – around £4,000 up on last year. We explain a bit more about these smaller grants later on in the grants list.

When we talk to applicants we suggest that they don't refer to our average grant size when framing their request. This is because we are keen to support what groups actually need so the average grant size is largely irrelevant in practice. Instead we encourage applicants to look at our grants lists (posted every three months on our website) to get a sense of the range and level of grants we make. Frequently, too, applicants don't put a figure to their request at the first stage: this is in response to our final application question which asks how Tudor can best help them, rather than how much funding they are looking for. The chart overleaf shows the profile of the grants made last year by size.

We want to make grants which respond directly to the priorities of our applicants and we are also committed to funding in ways which strengthen the whole organisation, not just particular areas of its work. Applicants continue to tell us that their biggest challenge is to secure core funding to cover things like key salaries and day-to-day running costs: this is reflected in the grants we make.

Across all grants made in the year 86% by value went towards core funding, 8% towards specific projects and 6% towards capital work. Focusing just on grants made towards revenue costs, 91% of our grants by value went to support the core work of organisations.

Grants to new organisations

- Continuation
- Funded before
- New organisation
- Already funding

36% of our grants went to groups we have never funded before.

In 2018–2019 36% of our grants went to organisations which we have never funded before; 31% were for continuation funding (so followed straight on from a previous grant); 28% went to organisations which we have funded at some point in the past and 5% went to organisations which were already holding another grant from us.

Tudor wants to be an open and accessible funder and this can be demonstrated by our commitment to funding groups we haven't supported before. We can also back organisations strongly even when they are new to us – 46% of the three year grants made over the year went to groups we hadn't funded before. This commitment is balanced, however, by our wish to develop reasonably long-term funding relationships where this is appropriate.

42% of the revenue grants made in 2018–2019 were made over three years or longer, 32% for two years and 25% over one year. Half of the one-year grants we made – 36 out of 71 – were small staff grants, development grants or Africa Group capacity-building grants, so one-off rather than 'mainstream' grants.

Alongside this 34% of the two or three year grants made over the year followed straight on from a previous grant, usually itself made over two or three years. This means that we often fund for a longer period – in many cases five or six years – than might be immediately obvious through reading our grants list.

This table shows where our grants went in 2018–2019. Tudor is a responsive funder, running an open grants programme and making grants in response to applications received. This can mean that we see fluctuations in grants going to different parts of the UK from year to year.

When reviewing our ‘give’ per region we focus on the grant per head figure, rather than the actual value of grants made, so that we can assess our grant commitments in the light of population figures. This year we saw increased levels of funding going into the North East and Yorkshire and the Humber, while commitments made in the East Midlands, West Midlands and Scotland dropped quite significantly. However, with a relatively small number of grants going to each region these figures offer no more than an indication of current practice.

The Eastern region is traditionally something of a ‘cold spot’ for Tudor in terms of applications received and funded: this year, as last year, our grant give was just £0.06 per head. We will continue to think about how we can encourage more applications from this part of the country.

The organisations we supported in 2018–2019

Tudor has a particular interest in supporting smaller-scale organisations. We therefore monitor the size of the organisations we fund, using organisation expenditure as an indicator. In 2018–2019 27% of our grants went to organisations with a turnover of less than £100,000, with 82% going to organisations spending less than £500,000 a year. A full breakdown of the grants we made to organisations of different sizes is given below: this analysis does not include staff grants, development grants or Africa Group capacity-building grants.

Tudor has a track record in supporting grassroots community activity, and in 2018–2019 30% of our grants provided support to organisations which underpin the stability and resilience of communities while also encouraging inclusion and positive social connections.

These community centres and resource centres, community development groups, community food projects, community gardens and growing schemes and local advice and advocacy projects play a vital role in improving the quality of life for local people.

Engagement with applicants and grant holders

Alongside this we also support organisations which address marginalisation and disadvantage in a more targeted way: for example in 2018–2019 10% of our grants went to groups providing support to refugees and asylum seekers, 10% to groups working with people with mental health issues, 6% to groups working with people with disabilities and 4% to groups working with the LGBT community.

We also monitor the proportion of our grants going towards targeted work with BAME communities, or to BAME-led groups. In 2018–2019 19% of our grants went towards work with this specific BAME focus.

256 visits and meetings with applicants and grant holders in 2018–2019.

Over the year Tudor’s Grants Team worked with a portfolio of around 740 ‘active’ grants, developing new applications, responding to reports and making payments as well as providing support where needed around a range of issues including governance, organisational development, recruitment, financial management, funding and evaluation. The groups we fund continue to operate within a pressurised and volatile climate, struggling to meet increasing demand as resources reduce. Organisations approach us with a wide range of difficulties and issues and we provide support where we can, whether by providing advice directly, sourcing more specialist guidance or agreeing changes in how our funding can be used.

Talking to our applicants and grant holders is one of the best ways for us to gather information, intelligence and learning, and is also crucial in building and strengthening trusting relationships. We appreciate the value of face-to-face contact so try to visit as many applicants and grant holders as we can, although this can be challenging as we are a national funder with a relatively small staff team. In 2018–2019 staff and trustees visited 153 organisations, and met another 103 at our offices.

UK grants 2018–2019

This section of the grants list covers most of our grants made within the UK: primarily grants made in response to applications received under our funding guidelines but also development grants – small grants up to a maximum of £7,500 intended to help a group strengthen and develop a particular aspect of their organisation. Development grants are made in response to a need identified by an organisation in discussion with their grants manager. Seven UK development grants were made in 2018–2019.

Overseas grants

Although Tudor is primarily a UK funder we also make a number of grants in Africa each year. Tudor's Africa Group – a small special interest group made up of trustees and staff – runs a targeted programme promoting ecological agriculture in Zimbabwe, Kenya and Uganda. This is a proactive funding programme and we don't consider unsolicited applications.

Through the Group, Tudor supports farmer-to-farmer learning initiatives which are cost effective and scalable and also build knowledge and expertise. Tudor also funds centres that can demonstrate agro-ecological approaches and act as informal or formal learning establishments. We encourage peer-to-peer learning between organisations through exchange visits and hold a biennial conference in Africa. Our ultimate aim is to strengthen the voice of the smallholder farmer – this resonates with our work in the UK which focuses on supporting marginalised communities.

We also make capacity-building and development grants to groups we fund in Africa, to help them share learning or develop particular aspects of their work. Eight capacity-building grants and one development grant were made in 2018-2019.

Last year trustees agreed a small number of grants towards global work that sits outside the Africa Group's programme. Two grants – made to Bioversity International to support work on the impact of seed laws on smallholder farmers and to the New Ventures Fund, based in the United States, to support the work of the Global Alliance for the Future of Food – were however closely linked to the Africa Group's focus on food sovereignty. Another significant grant, to the Jubilee Debt Campaign, confirmed the trustees' long-term commitment to supporting their work to end poverty and inequality caused by unjust debt: we first made a grant to the Jubilee Debt Campaign in 1996.
